Free tax help offered to lower income people

By Scott Glidewell
Staff Writer

Beginning Feb. 4, free income tax preparation will be available from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. Monday through Thursday, in the Main Building across from the Student Life office.

The Volunteer Income Tax Assistance program is available to all families and individuals with a household income of less than $39,000.

Don Wigley, VITA site coordinator, said there would be a total of five volunteers preparing tax returns this year.

"We prepare the returns and then e-file them so they don't have to do anything," Wigley said.

Wigley also said all of the VITA volunteers have years of experience with tax preparation.

OCCC students older, more diverse

Preliminary report numbers also show slight enrollment decrease

By Chris Lusk
Editor

OCCC students are a few months older and more ethnically diverse compared to last year, college statistics show. Many also are returning for additional semesters.

Enrollment numbers show the average age of students has risen from 25.4 to 26, while the number of returning students has increased by 2.7 percent.

After a small increase last fall, enrollment has slightly decreased this spring.

Preliminary numbers show a 1.0 percent decrease from spring 2007. Total students went from 11,391 to 11,274 this semester.

Total credit hours scheduled fell 0.5 percent, from 98,742 to 98,216.

Executive Director of Planning Stu Harvey said that enrollment has been on an overall decline the past few years.

"We have seen figures stay flat or slightly decline over the last two or three years," he said.

Harvey said that could change if economic conditions worsen. Typically, he said, when the local and national economies slow down, enrollment increases — especially in older students.

"Although our numbers showed a slight decrease, we do show an older student body," Harvey said. "This indicates an increase in older student enrollment."

A big reason for the enrollment slowdown can be attributed to a large decrease in new student enrollment, Harvey said.

College statistics show an 18 percent decrease in the number of new student enrollments from spring 2007, from 2,028 to 1,662 this semester.

Harvey said a number of factors can explain the sharp decline, including local demographics.

"We have actually planned on a decrease in new student enrollment," he said. "Statistics show that there will be fewer high school graduates over the next decade, purely based on the fact that there just aren't as many kids right now as there have been."

Harvey noted the college's emphasis in retaining students.

At the same time, forecasts show a large increase in older students should be expected over the next 10 years, Harvey said.

The college also experienced an increase in minority enrollment, Harvey said.

More than 30 percent of OCCC's students represent racial and ethnic minorities, he said.

The data showed Asian student numbers rose 4.4 percent, from 789 to 824. African-American numbers dropped 0.3 percent, from

Textbooks costly, options available

The high cost of textbooks is something many students find distressing. They don't have a choice about buying them because, if they want to do their best, they will need the textbook.

Many times, when students go to buy textbooks they have to buy the new book as a packet, with computer software. This can get quite expensive.

For one computer science course, the packet is $245.10, while the Organic Chemistry I textbook is $170.25.

Some students may be able to get by using a past edition textbook for their class.

Some books that are past editions are not that different from the new ones. The old book may not be as good, but it sometimes will do.

Some students choose not to buy books at all because they just can't afford it.

Thankfully, some professors have their course textbooks on reserve at the circulations desk of the library.

Students may check out reserve textbooks for two hours at a time. A time limit is set because there are many students who come in and need to use the textbooks. The only disadvantage is that being a reserve textbook, you will only be able to use it while you are in the library.

What also doesn't seem completely fair is that when you turn in your textbook to receive cash back at the end of the semester, you may get a response that a new edition is being issued and you will not receive any money back for your book.

And if you are lucky enough to receive money back for your book, it is often drastically less than the price you paid for it.

Students may have noticed that new stores are being opened, such as Textbook Brokers, where you can sell textbooks, and buy books for much cheaper than what the college provides.

One girl announced to our class that she bought all five of her textbooks needed for the semester for under $200 from Textbook Brokers.

Textbook Brokers also gives a 5 percent discount to students if you are on their MySpace "friends list."

This is just one place that has begun to receive business when it comes to buying and selling textbooks. There could possibly be more opening.

Textbook Brokers will buy back books all year round and sometimes will give you more money back than the college will. Students may also sell and buy textbooks from www.half.ebay.com and www.amazon.com. There may be a small shipping or processing fee.

It's not that students don't want to buy and sell their textbooks at the college bookstore, but a college student will want to save money any way possible.

And avoiding our own college bookstore to go elsewhere, sadly, is what some students are beginning to do.

New library resource available to students

To the editor:

The Library is pleased to announce the launch of a new online resource, Culturegrams.

With the ever growing diversity of the OCCC community and our focus on improving global and cultural awareness, Culturegrams is an excellent resource for both students and staff.

Culturegrams is an excellent starting point for research or quick facts about other cultures, daily life, history, food, people, countries and much more.

This new resource compliments another resource the Library added last year called Country-Watch.

Culturegrams is currently the "Featured Resource" on the Library's website located at www.occc.edu/library.

It can also be found under "Find Web Sites."

Hopefully students and staff will find Culturegrams useful in answering a multitude of questions and inquiries relating to the various cultures around the world.

If there are any questions about this great new resource, please contact the Library Assistance Desk at 405-682-1611, ext. 7251.

Comments and Reviews

‘There Will Be Blood’ a gritty, dramatic movie

“There Will Be Blood” is a well-crafted, gripping drama loosely based upon Upton Sinclair’s 1926 novel “Oil!”

From the opening scene until the last line of dialogue the audience is drawn slowly, deliberately down the path of unchecked human greed and ambition to the destruction that ultimately accompanies ruthless determination.

“Blood” is the fifth movie from director Paul Thomas Anderson (“Boo-gie Nights,” “Magnolia”) and it is by far the best.

Intense, gritty, and dark the acting, cinematography, and score are all interwoven in meticulous fashion.

The film begins in 1898 in the bottom of a mine-shaft in Texas, but quickly transitions to the oil fields of California.

The story spans a 30-year time period during the early days of the oil industry, but the movie is not ultimately about the oil industry. It is about the rise and fall of Daniel Plainview.

Daniel Day-Lewis’s performance as Daniel Plainview is truly mesmerizing.

As with anything it is control of the little things that really make a difference and Day-Lewis’s control of the smaller parts of his role are what make the whole package so complete.

His facial expressions, speech patterns and seething raw emotion allow him to assume the role with an authority, an entirety that is truly amazing.

Through Day-Lewis’s eyes and his mannerisms, we are allowed to see into the soul of Plainview, which seems as black and as explosive as the oil that he drills for.

Throughout the movie Plainview is seemingly consumed by tension, perpetually ready to explode into an animalistic rage.

Although at times he is reserved, this is only if it will help him get what he wants. Always the viewer can see the monster in his eyes—greedy, insatiable and unstoppable.

“I have a competition in me. I want no one else to succeed....”

With these words, Daniel Plainview best describes himself: a driven, obsessive man who alienates everyone around him and ultimately destroys the world that he creates.

The movie, while spectacular, is not necessarily easy viewing with a running time of approximately two and a half hours.

It requires that the audience pay attention and wait for the story to be told.

If you want an action flick, then go see Rambo, but if you want to see a great dramatic film go see “There Will Be Blood.”

ADVISERS 11

When is it perception and when is it reality? When someone hears the words Academic Advising, what does that really mean to them? Many believe Academic Advising is a one-size-fits-all approach. The reality is that each student’s needs are different.

It has been interesting to listen to some of the student responses as they visit with an Academic Adviser at our Triage desk. Here’s one example that I’ve heard several times:

Adviser: Hi, how can I assist you?

Student: Yeah, I need some classes.

Adviser: What type of classes are you interested in?

Student: I don’t care, just give me 12 hours.

Adviser: Have you taken any college courses?

Student: Not that I know of.

Adviser: What are you interested in for a degree?

Student: I have no idea; I figured you would pick some out for me.

Adviser: Why would you think this?

Student: Isn’t that what an Academic Adviser does?

Can you envision the donut shop with 100 different varieties on the wall and the customer asks for a dozen donuts and the baker turns to the donut wall and wonders where to start?

Of course, not all of our students have this approach. However, for the ones that do, we open the doors to the world of Academic Advising. We take the time and look with the student at the puzzle pieces.

We start with the course catalog, class schedule, credit hours, degree options and then move into the interview process.

The reality is the Office of Academic Advising serves many purposes. Many students go to advising because they are concerned with the class schedules.

However, students are encouraged to go to Advising and Career Services for other various reasons. For instance, students may need to:

- Confirm or change their program/major
- Request to be assigned a Faculty Adviser
- Request a Degree check
- Write a Diversified Studies Contract
- Obtain information on career exploration
- Get help with course selections
- Get their assessment tests evaluated

When students are looking for assistance with their class schedules or using MineOnline, we introduce them to a Peer Adviser.

A Peer Adviser is a fellow student who is successful in their courses, understands how to build a class schedule, and uses MineOnline for many of their academic record needs.

We want students to take ownership of their future and their education and we are willing to help them do this by putting the puzzle together one piece at a time.

Fall break proposed

By Lynsey Suchy
News Writing Student

Faculty Association members were divided in their view of whether OCCC should add a two-day fall break in October.

About half voted for the break with half voting against it.

The topic of fall break took a good part of the group's meeting Jan. 22 on campus.

FA Chairman and Math Professor Paul Buckelew told the group President Paul Sechrist had asked the Faculty Association for its opinion on adding a fall break.

Views were expressed on both sides. Several faculty members said taking off a Thursday and Friday in October would create problems in some classes.

Jay Malmstrom, math professor, said concerns are mostly for science and nursing students who have labs. The labs are on a strict schedule and are hard to make up.

Other professors said their students need some time off earlier in the semester, that Thanksgiving week is too late.

Student Chris Stewart, chairman of The Leadership Council, said not having a fall break in October can be an issue for students who have children.

Public schools are out for fall break, meaning parents would have to pay extra money for their children to be watched or parents might even have to miss class.

The Leadership Council voted unanimously for a fall break on a Thursday and Friday in October and to take away one day of Thanksgiving Break.

Three options were presented to the faculty and voted on:

- Leaving the college calendar as it is, with fall break being Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of Thanksgiving week,

- Add a fall break by canceling classes on a Thursday and Friday in October when the public schools take a fall break, then conduct classes on the Monday and Tuesday of Thanksgiving week instead of having Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday off,

- Add a fall break by canceling classes on a Thursday and Friday in October when the public schools take a fall break, and keep the Thanksgiving holidays as they are now.

The faculty voted with 13 professors voting for leaving the schedule as it is and 13 voting for a change to be made.

Two voted to add the break in October without making any changes to the Thanksgiving schedule. The split decision will be given to Sechrist to review.

All fire alarms should be heeded official says

By Stephen Sossamon
Staff Writer

Fire alarms on campus caused students to evacuate buildings 10 times last year, said Ike Sloas, Safety and Security director.

And, if the fire alarm does go off, everyone should head to the nearest exit, without getting on elevators, and proceed to the parking lot, according to the safety and security procedures poster.

"No fire alarm is a false alarm," Sloas said. "We don't question why an alarm goes off."

"It's very important everyone take fire alarms seriously and treat all of them equally."

Sloas's records show last year there were a total of 31 incidents involving a fire alarm.

If the alarm sounds, the building in which the alarm went off is evacuated immediately, Sloas said.

"Usually, if the library has to be evacuated, the Main Building doesn't necessarily have to."

Sloas said many of the alarms indicated an actual fire.

We investigated all of those alarms," he said. "I only remember four or five being something minor, like burnt popcorn."

All fires have the potential to be dangerous, Sloas said.

"Any fire in areas where chemicals are used or stored are extremely dangerous," he said.

Sloas said some of the most costly fires have been vehicle fires.

"They caused several hundred dollars in damage to electrical systems," he said.

Sloas added that losses during building fires have been minimal.

Though the system is efficient, Sloas said the system sometimes goes off unnecessarily.

"Dirty smoke heads, and sometimes the water pressure, can cause an alarm to go off," he said.

Sloas said roughly $50,000 a year goes to maintenance of all the fire detecting systems on campus.

"The annual inspection is done during spring break, when students are off campus," he said.

He also said that his officers do daily checks of the water pressure for the fire suppression systems.

Two accidents in three days resulted in slight damages to all the vehicles involved.

At around 7:35 p.m. Jan. 24, two vehicles were involved in an accident on the east side of J.L. Keels Boulevard according to a report by Officer Jacob Roby.

The first vehicle, a silver 1996 Saturn driven by Jonathan Hole, was traveling eastbound in the left lane when he was hit by Luke Westover, in a black 2003 Dodge Ram 1500.

According to the report, Westover was leaving Lot A when he failed to yield to oncoming traffic while making his left turn.

"My foot slipped off the brake and I couldn't stop," Westover told Roby.

Information was traded between Hole and Westover and pictures were taken.

Another non-injury accident occurred earlier in the week. At 5:10 p.m. Jan. 22, Officer Johnathan Walker was dispatched to May and Faculty Circle to investigate.

A 1991 Chevy Camaro, driven by Corbin Massengale, was heading eastbound on faculty circle and failed to come to a complete stop at the stop sign, according to Walker's report.

A second vehicle, a Chevrolet 1500 Extended Cab driven by Larry Barnes, was eastbound, about to cross Faculty Circle, when it was hit by Massengale on the driver's door and rear corner panel.

Both vehicles were able drive from the scene after both parties exchanged information and photos were taken of both vehicles.

The campus doesn't stage fire drills, Sloas said.

"We never have them because we aren't mandated to. We don't have dorms (which would force a fire

Earn college credit while in Malaysia

By Amanda McCutchen
Staff Writer

There is a first time for everything, and OCCC's Center for International Business has created its own first. OCCC students can now study abroad for a semester or even a year, and earn credits for graduation.

The college has recently signed two articulation agreements with colleges in Malaysia, said V.J. Ramachandran, center co-director and OCCC business professor.

An articulation agreement was signed Dec. 3 between Jim Schwark, OCCC business dean, and the business dean at the Management and Science University in Shah Alam, Malaysia.

Also, Schwark signed an agreement with the business dean at the University College Sedaya Institution in Taman Connaught, about six miles south of the capital, Kuala Lumpur.

"The first reason why I chose Malaysia is because I am from there," Ramachandran said.

He said the high-quality education in Malaysia and the fact English is spoken there figured into his choice.

He said the country is multi-cultural and friendly to foreigners.

Ramachandran recently took a two-week trip to Malaysia and met with six potential colleges for this program. Ramachandran is spent 10 years there as a professor.

"I looked at colleges with similar business curriculums, matching classes and textbooks," Ramachandran said. "We don't take classes from just anybody. They need to be well qualified to teach our students."

There are eight business courses listed at both MCU and USCI that also are offered at OCCC. Classes will be taught in English, and will consist of local and international students, as well as American students.

Ramachandran said speaking English is a requirement in schools and colleges in Malaysia.

The estimated cost for a 12-credit-hour semester is $1,000 per month. That includes lodging, food, entertainment, classes and medical insurance. The two schools also offer internships and tours of companies.

The estimated cost does not include airfare. A round-trip flight will cost about $1,200.

From Oklahoma, there are two layovers, Ramachandran said, and the total flight clocks in around 20 hours. Students will be picked up at the airport.

Malaysia is located in the southern Asia region near Indonesia. Malaysia has two primary territories — East and West Malaysia.

"Malaysia is a favorite vacation spot because of all the small islands, the weather is very tropical, and it is very similar to Hawaii," Ramachandran said.

Both MSU and USCI have campuses that are near the capital.

For more information, contact Ramachandran at vramachandran@occc.edu, or 405-682-1611, ext. 7220.

Trio shares joy of music with students

By Jessica Shadid
News Writing Student

"Discovering the Joy of Music" would be the title of choice for the lecture presented by Allégresse, the musical trio who performed at OCCC on Jan. 29. Allégresse is a trio that consists of Annie Gnojek, Margaret Marco and Ellen Bottorff.

They called it a play on words, seeing that Allégresse means "joy" in French. This trio of women create a unique classical sound produced by the piano played by Bottorff, the oboe played by Marco and the flute played by Gnojek.

The women said they have been close friends and colleagues for more than a decade. Allégresse, as a group, however, only has been together for a year. Residing in Lawrence, Kan., the trio has played all over the world.

During the educational lecture earlier in the day, the women performed pieces mainly from artists Johann Joachim Quantz from the Baroque period (1600 to 1750) and Madeleine Dring, a modern artist of the 1960s.

Both outstanding performances, they created similar sounds, yet also unique melodies which relate to the times in which they were produced.

Many who attended the lecture would agree one of the most interesting parts was to watch Marco casually clean out the saliva build-up from inside her oboe with cigarette papers.

Smiles emerged across the room, as the group not only entertained the students and professors with their musical talents, but also with their charming personalities.

In an interview, they were asked where some of their greatest performance experiences took place.

Gnojek replied she had performed as a soloist in Beijing, China. Gnojek and the others said, as a group, performing at OCCC is always an honor.

The group is looking forward to commissioning new work with artist Gabriella Frank, and plans to perform in Manchester, England, in 2009 at the International Double Reed Convention. Allégresse also is planning to have a CD available this spring.

After the lecture, Gnojek explained how the group came upon the name Allégresse, which she said came from her husband. He was inspired by one of his favorite artists, Maria Snyder, who had a song titled "Allégresse." The women noted, as a result of their success, the word is now associated with them.

"Now, when you Google 'Allégresse,' our group is the outcome of the search rather than Maria Snyder," Marco said.

The performers have years of musical training and experience to their credit.

Marco received degrees from Northwestern University, the University of Iowa and the University of Illinois. She currently is a co-principal for the Kansas City Chamber Orchestra, and she often performs with the Kansas City Symphony, the Kansas City Lyric Opera, and the Kansas City Ballet Orchestra.

Bottorff is a graduate of the University of Missouri-Kansas City Conservatory of Music and Missouri Western University. She has traveled all over the United States and Canada. She also has performed on live radio broadcasts, regional and national conventions, and cruise ships. Bottorff presently is an interim piano professor at the University of Kansas.

Gnojek obtained undergraduate and master's degrees from the University of Kansas. She manages a flute studio in the Lawrence and Kansas City area. Gnojek also won national titles at the Music Teacher's National Association Competition in 2003, 2004 and 2007.

For more information about the group, visit www.allegresse.com.

Month has long, rich history

By Cynthia Praefke

"Salvation for a race, nation or class must come from within. Freedom is never granted; it is won. Justice is never given; it is exacted and the struggle must be continuous for freedom is never a final fact ..." Those are the words of A. Phillip Randolph, a civil rights activist of the early 1900s.

The month of February has been set aside to celebrate the history of black America.

Why February? According to Infoplease.com, Black History Month began in 1926 when Carter G. Woodson, the second black man to get a doctorate from Harvard, objected to the way the black population was portrayed in history books.

He decided, because February was the birth month of Frederick Douglass and Abraham Lincoln, it would be appropriate to study their influence on black history.

But, there are many other important historical events that happened in February.

- The 15th Amendment, granting blacks the right to vote, was passed Feb. 3, 1870.

- Hiram R. Revels, the first black U.S. senator, took his oath of office Feb. 25, 1870.

- The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) was founded in New York City on Feb. 12, 1909.

- Feb. 1, 1960, a group of students from Greensboro, N.C. began a peaceful sit-in at a segregated Woolworth's lunch counter with Martin Luther King.

- Three black Muslims shot Malcolm X to death on Feb. 21, 1965.

- During the Indian wars of the 1800s, black soldiers earned the respect of Native Americans who named them Buffalo Soldiers.

Student Life hosted a Leadership workshop that provided an entertaining and education day for all student club members.

The workshop was held Jan. 19 at the new Human Body Exhibit at the Science Museum Oklahoma.

Chris Stewart, Leadership Council chairman, said the workshop was intended for training club leaders and to encourage members to take leadership rolls.

Stewart said 42 representatives from all the clubs and organizations from OCCC attended the event by way of a charter bus for $5.

The $5 also included a T-shirt, door prizes, drinks and a food buffet, Stewart said.

A conference was held for all club members to get to know one another better.

"TLC held an icebreaker," Stewart said. "It was called 'working a room' and was designed for everybody to get up and moving to meet new people."

Meredith Dake, guest speaker for the leadership workshop, went over different aspects of club leadership.

Dake won first place in the Business Professionals of American National Prepared Speech competition in 2007, Stewart said.

He said the workshop also covered the nuts and bolts of club leadership.

The guidelines taught club leaders how to plan for events and how to meet deadlines for certain occasions, Stewart said.

Along with the business part, Stewart said, everyone who attended had a great time.

"Most people explored the body exhibit," Stewart said. "Others went to the OmniDome or just walked around and looked at different stuff throughout."

"It was a very educational experience."

Isela Perez, TRIO peer mentor, said she thought the experience was interesting and would do it again.

"We got to know they new students and to what they do."

Soccer team seeks playoff run

By Matt Bishop
Staff Writer

OCCC's Club Soccer is hoping to make a run at the playoffs this spring. Preparations are under way for the spring season starting in February.

K. B. Yeboah is returning for another year as the club soccer coach.

Yeboah said he is excited for the season to start and hopes to see the team make the playoffs.

The soccer team showed potential last season, but finished in a five-way tie for the three remaining playoff spots and were left out by way of tiebreakers.

"We put ourselves in that position for the tiebreaker," Yeboah said. "I think this year we can make the playoffs if enough people come back."

The soccer team had about 17 players who showed up to practice and games on a consistent basis last fall.

Yeboah said he encourages all his players from last season to return because the team had success.

"We had a good team going, and I hope we can get everybody back and pick up where we left off," Yeboah said.

"If they are in school, I hope they come and play again."

The date of the first game is undecided yet, he said.

Jalal Daneshfar, director of the Oklahoma Collegiate Club Soccer League, said the season will commence either Feb. 23 or March 1.

Registration for the season will start on Feb. 11.

Yeboah said he plans on starting practice on Feb. 11 as well.

Players may sign up by showing up to the practices.

The soccer team holds its practices at the south field on the OCCC campus near the May Ave. entrance.

Recreation and Sports Specialist Eric Watson said he will be posting fliers around the campus giving students information about how to join the soccer team.

Players interested can also contact Eric Watson at 405-682-1611, ext. 7786 or Coach Yeboah at 405-255-7735.

A schedule has not yet been released because the number of teams participating is not known, Daneshfar said.

"After the deadline for team registration passes, we will make a schedule as soon as possible," Daneshfar said.

OCCC students offered résumé help

By Brian Schroeder
Staff Writer

While looking for a job, an OCCC student stumbled upon a free service that helped her in producing a résumé better than she imagined. After completing the résumé with the help of Career and Employment Services, she posted it online and was called by an employer soon after to schedule an interview.

On Feb. 12, career and employment services will be offering a free Optimal Résumé Creation workshop to help students prepare résumés and post them online.

Judi McGee, Employment Services coordinator, said the workshop will allow students to see how the Optimal Résumé software works, so they can come back at their leisure to draft a résumé.

"It's an easy way students can learn how to put a résumé together," she said.

"It also allows you to save up to five different résumés that can be changed and updated at the user's convenience."

Cathy Hutchens, Career and Employment Services assistant, said the software used for developing résumés and cover letters is extremely easy to use.

"We use the program every day," she said. "It walks the students right through and gives them examples to use if they get stuck or don't know how to word something. It is very user friendly."

The software is available to OCCC students free of charge. Students are welcome to use the software to write a résumé, and the staff at Career and Employment services is there to assist, McGee said.

"We are here to help anyone who needs the help," she said. "Anytime, if anyone needs assistance, there are four of us in this department who can help."

McGee said the software is not limited to people who are writing résumés for the first time. Those who have put together a résumé in the past can bring it in to get suggestions on how to make it stronger.

Lyndsie Stremow, Admissions assistant, said she learned how to write a résumé by using tools found online. She said the class would benefit her résumé as well as résumé writing skills.

"I know I would learn how to write a more organized and professional résumé," Stremow said.

"I would be able to include several things employees would want to see on a résumé."

Once a résumé is complete, students are able to post it on the OCCC job website, as well as the Oklahoma Employment Security Commission website.

"I've had more people than anticipated call me and tell me they just got a job because they posted their résumé on our job board," McGee said.

"One student who posted a résumé on our job board called and said the company that contacted her was one she had always wanted to work for, and the reason they contacted her was because her résumé was so well done."

Lend a helping hand

By Scott Glidewell
Staff Writer

The Office of Student Life will host a Volunteer Fair from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m. on Tuesday, Feb. 12, in the College Union.

Community Engagement coordinator Jon Horinek said the fair is an opportunity for community service agencies to explain what their organizations do and to recruit new volunteers.

"The fair is designed to highlight opportunities for volunteer service where OCCC students are needed," Horinek said.

Horinek said he expects a turnout of between 12 and 15 different agencies this year.

The Regional Food Bank, American Red Cross and Habitat for Humanity, among others, will be present at this year's fair.

Horinek said volunteering is a great way for students to learn life skills and to challenge assumptions about the world around them.

"Participation in community service is the best way

"Volunteering is one of the few things people can do where they can make an immediate, tangible impact on people's lives."

Community Engagement Coordinator

to become a well-rounded student and citizen," Horinek said. "Volunteering is one of the few things people can do where they can make an immediate, tangible impact on people's lives."

Horinek said students who volunteer report having a greater understanding of themselves and their community.

"Plus, it is often a lot of fun," he said.

Another way that volunteering can help students is with their résumés and college applications, Horinek said. Many applications now provide areas where applicants can fill in volunteer work. Horinek said many scholarships and employers are even beginning to require some volunteer work.

According to figures from the Office of Student Life,

OCCC has more than 2,000 students offering more than 10,000 hours of volunteer service each academic year.

Enrollment numbers down slightly while student diversity increases 997 to 994. Native American students increased 8.1 percent, from 614 to 664.

Hispanic students increased 4.3 percent, from 828 to 864.

"Usually, the college's Hispanic population is the largest growing," Harvey said.

"We saw a small growth this semester, but not as large as in the past.

"This can probably be attributed to House Bill 1804, among other things."

HB1804 is an immigration reform bill that went into effect Nov. 1 of last year.

He said at last check, the college had approximately 150 to 200 undocumented students.

Although there was change among the minority numbers, gender numbers remained relatively consistent.

Female enrollment numbers rose 0.3 percent, while male numbers declined 3.2 percent.

Fifty seven percent of OCCC's enrollment is female.

Online enrollment also increased 15 percent, Harvey said.

He said the federal government estimates online courses will grow 10 times faster than all other college courses.

"[Online enrollment] continues to grow," he said. "More and more students are discovering that they can take college classes while balancing all the other areas of their life with ease through our online courses.

"It's an extremely important part of this college."

Volunteer tax preparers to offer free assistance for those with low incomes

"VITA,"

volunteer that has been here for the last 15 years

Because of their experience and training, Wigley believes the tax preparation VITA provides is just as good as any pay service out there.

"Every volunteer has to go through IRS training," he said. "We all have to be certified by the IRS before we can do anyone's tax return for them."

Wigley said it is important that anyone interested in using VITA to prepare their taxes this year should be sure to bring their W-2s, 1099 tax forms, Social Security cards for all members of household on the return, a photo ID card and a copy of last year's tax return.

Student Life Assistant Marcy Roll said the VITA program has been available to students and local community members for more than 15 years.

She said the earlier in the day students come, the better.

"Because it's a volunteer service, there won't always be five people to provide assistance," she said.

"Sometimes there may only be two or three volunteers at the booths."

Wigley said February is a very busy month for the VITA volunteers so long lines can be expected.

"Usually, people are antsy to get their refund because they have waited for it all year, he said. If they can wait until March the lines are usually a little shorter."

Student Life Director Darin Behara said VITA is a great service for the people in the local community and for OCCC students.

Behara said he wants to caution students who might consider using a service that charges money for tax preparation or one that offers an instant refund.

"It's great to get a refund right away, but it is a service that you have to pay for," Behara said,

"If there is any way that a student could wait a few weeks for their refund I would advise them to do so, instead of giving up a percentage to receive the money immediately."
